

Emilie and Subhas: A True Love Story

EMILIE AND SUBHAS: A TRUE LOVE STORY

Bose had a busy itinerary everywhere but they also did a lot of sightseeing. It was Sisir's first trip to Europe and he enjoyed it greatly, and took a lot of photographs. But the highlight of the trip was Vienna, for obvious reasons.

My sister-in-law Roma told me that the three younger children—Roma, Chitra and Subrata—had not been told about the marriage although the older brothers and sisters were taken into confidence. Before they left Prague for Vienna Sarat Bose called the two daughters to his room in the hotel and said in a simple manner—your Rangakakababu (Subhas) had married, we are going to meet his wife. Roma recollected how her father pronounced the Bengali word 'biye' (marriage) in its colloquial form 'bey' and said in Bengali, 'Tomader Rangakakababu bey korechhilen.'

About this first meeting between Auntie and Subhas's beloved Mejdada and his wife and children I have heard so much from Auntie, as well as from Sisir and his two younger sisters. Sisir has described it extensively in both Bosu-bari (Bengali, 1985) and its English version The Bose Brothers, An Intimate Memoir (2016). On my first visit to Vienna in the winter of 1959, we were chatting in the kitchen on the first evening when Auntie showed me the gold bangles she wore and told me, 'Your mother-in-law gave me these when we first met [in November 1948]. I have never taken them off.' Bivabati had
